Dear Mr. Bunn:

The Anniston Army Depot in Anniston, Alabama has long been the model of efficiency and excellence as an ordinance facility for the United States Department of Defense. The entire AAD workforce is dedicated to the cause and mission of the Department of Defense. This is made apparent through the excellent work done in Anniston.

With that in mind I must take exception to the proposed National Security Personnel System. This system would force workers to compete with one another for pay raises, increase conflict among employees, affect teamwork and reward only short-term outcomes. The impact on morale would be substantially negative.

I urge you to reconsider the implementation of the proposed new rules, known as the National Security Personnel System, until the items listed above are addressed.

Sincerely,
